

Hello Mayor Carrier:

Dover was intended to be a stopover during my meandering thru this part of New Hampshire. I had an unfortunate accident (more embarrassing than hurtful) and found myself ringing the doorbell to your Fire Department headquarters hoping for some assistance.

Lieutenant Eric Andersen unhesitatingly offered assistance. He allowed me into the building, took care of my soiled and unwearable clothing, allowed me to shower and loaned me clean clothes while he had mine washed and dried.

This unbelievable level of kindness and consideration was offered unconditionally as tho it was an ordinary part of the duties of his job (which is not really why cities have fire departments).

I found this demonstration of human compassion so powerful that it motivated me to remain in your city so I could get to know it better. After the impressive evening parade I decided that I wanted to live in this city. I'm working out the logistics, and am there to stay, and am truly thankful to have met a man named Eric Andersen !!!

Fond Regards,
